2020 Lunar Calendar and Datebook Independently Published
The traditional Chinese Lunar Calendar has connections to the Five Elements of ancient China: Wood, Fire, Earth, Metal and Water which in turn have given their names to the Five Planets: Jupiter, Mars, Saturn, Venus and Mercury. The Five Elements are also related to the Five Directions: East, South, Centre, West and North as well as to the Four Seasons plus the Change of Seasons. Consequently tables explaining these have been included. The 5 Elements combine with the sun and moon to give us the 7 days of the week which are still used in Japan. The 24 Solar Terms, which divide the year into 24 periods of about 15 days, are another feature of the traditional Chinese calendar. They mark the summer and winter solstices, the spring and autumn equinoxes as well as the beginnings of the seasons. These are essential for deciding on times for planting and harvesting of crops and the 12 major Solar Terms are closely related to the 12 signs of the Western Zodiac. The 12 Earthly Branches represented by 12 animals give us a 12 year period and, when they are combined with the 10 Heavenly Stems, they give us the 60 year cycle of the traditional Chinese calendar. Tables related to all of these have been included as well as 40 pages of conversion tables from the Chinese Lunar calendar to the Gregorian calendar from 1804/1805 to 2100. Readers can easily and accurately find out the Chinese year and animal of their birth as well as the birth details of their parents and grandparents. These tables are also a useful tool for looking at Chinese history. For example the Xin Hai Revolution, which ended the rule of China's emperors, occurred during the year Xin Hai between 30 Jan 1911 and 17 Feb 1912. The charts show how Xin Hai is composed of Heavenly Stem Xin and Earthly Branch Hai. Fortune telling is another function of the traditional calendar and a 13 page table related to fortune telling in marriage, derived from a wall chart in the Wan Shou Eight Immortals Temple in Xi'an, is also included.

Lunar calendars suffer from an inherent uncertainty in the length of each month and the number of months in the year. Variable atmospheric conditions, weather and the acuity of the eye of an observer mean that the first sighting of the new moon crescent can never be known in advance. Calendars which rely on such observations to define the beginning of a new month therefore suffer from this lack of certainty as to whether a month will begin on a given day or the next. The papers in this volume address the question of how ancient and medieval societies lived with the uncertainties of a lunar calendar. How did lack of foreknowledge of the beginning of the month impact upon administration, the planning of festivals, and historical record keeping? Did societies replace the observation of the new moon crescent with schematic calendars or calendars based upon astronomical calculations and what were the ideological and practical consequences of such a change? The contributors to this volume address these topics from the perspectives of a variety of Ancient Near Eastern, Jewish, Ancient and Medieval European, Asian and American cultures. Full moons were named centuries ago by the Algonquin people who lived in what today is the southeastern part of Canada and the northeastern part of the United States, west to beyond the Great Lakes. The tribes kept track of the seasons by giving each full moon of every month a distinct name. The names of each moon varied among the tribes, but overall, the names used by any given tribe celebrated, and reminded of, those parts of the annual cycle of life that were current when the full moons were manifest. Every month of each season marked a significant event in nature. Whether it was time to pick wild strawberries, fish the great lakes and streams, or harvest corn, the Algonquins understood that their existence hinged on the sustainability, or renewal, of Earth's resources. Their survival hung in careful balance with nature. Behind each beautiful, full-moon name is the Algonquin's honor and respect for the animals, trees, weather and waters -- and for all that call the same place "endaanhg." Here, in Full Wolf Moon, Cheryl Wilke uniquely pairs narrative prose with haiku poetry to tell the story of Native American tradition through the eyes of a child. Award-winning illustrator Ernest Gillman's sensitive artwork brings these moments in Algonquin culture history to life. Full Wolf Moon invites the reader to celebrate that which we all share -- Earth's full moons.

Lunar Calendar 2017

We all live our lives by the Sun and the Moon The lunar calendar is a main pillar of Chinese tradition and culture, encompassing many festivals and stories. Though most explorations of Taoism take place within the realm of scripture, exercises, and formal lectures, Deng Ming-Dao looks to the lunar calendar and highlights where these festivals and stories coincide with Taoism, giving readers a renewed and original way into this ancient philosophy. Each day of the lunar year is represented with a reading meditation, original translations, illustrations, and illuminating facts about festivals and traditions, providing readers with the context that gives Taoism such depth and resonance. Unlike any other book, and beautifully illustrated with more than 400 photo-graphs and drawings, The Lunar Tao offers a new way to explore Taoism and shows readers how to include the tenets of Taoism in daily life.

Moon Phase Journal, Notebook, Composition Notebook, Calendar 2022, Lunar Contact Log Book

Astronomy is one of earliest sciences that continued to evolve, through its application particularly in monitoring its evolving time. This has been proven as powerful tool in pegging important events in the evolution of human civilization. One of such phenomena is the lunar movement and it's implicating on lunar calendar, a template used by many countries around the world, notably Chinese, Jews and Muslim calendar. Observation shows that, dates in Islamic calendar, which are based on counting of days after first sighting of new crescent moon, at about 30 minutes after sunset, are mostly controversial. Considering the present advancement in science and technology, the controversy still persists and there is no available lunar calendar that is reliable for accurate longtime planning for Islamic activities. This resulted to lack of convincing Islamic calendar. Generally, observation that depends on naked eye sighting which has been widely used locally, cannot give reliable data for scientific analysis of lunar calendar because, the new crescent moon could be above western horizon after sunset, but due to obscurity impinged by weather or visual impairment, it may not be sighted. Therefore, for a true evaluation of lunar calendar, a scientific approach is adopted in order to determine possible first lunar location above western horizon at about 30 minutes after sunset, which is considered for reference location and time. This research shows that, the available lunar calendars are mainly drawn on the basis of numerical difference considered as the only drift before now, known as a consequence of the difference between the Islamic calendar and the Gregorian calendar. In this project, harmonic drift in lunar dates against the Gregorian calendar is noticed as a secondary drift and possible cause of the discrepancy in lunar calendar. The anomaly is in cooperated in developing the lunar calendar, thus aided the development of a reliable lunar calendar that could project dates for many years without showing any discrepancies. I hope that this book will be exciting to beneficiaries who include educational institutions and research centers, as well as individual enthusiasts of astronomy.

Cycles Journal 2022

This volume brings together both the elementary scientific facts that any lunar calendar formulation cannot ignore and a summary of the pressing scientific questions of particular interest to the Islamic calendar. Scientific aspects of the problem are thoroughly reviewed without prejudicing the argument in purely Islamic juridical questions and differences. The results are of great significance to both Islamic scholars and the general Muslim public. The papers presented are of a high scientific quality and are followed by a unanimous statement of the professional astronomers on the scientific questions. If these conclusions are followed, the varying sets of conventions used by different Islamic populations can be made self-consistent and free from scientific errors, even if they still differ from each other. This new edition allows the correction of errors in the first edition, makes the style more uniform among the papers, and improves the articles' graphs and figures. It aims to serve as an effective tool for addressing the calendrical issues that motivated the conference more than being merely a historical record. A new Afterword summarizes refinements in the scientific issues that have taken place in the ten years since the conference, many of which were prompted by the work presented here.
